KIDNEY STONES— THEY'RE PAINFUL

By Allan B. Magie, Ph.D., M.P.H.

If you have ever passed a kidney stone you are aware of one thing—it can be one of the most painful things a person can experience in life.

Kidney stones are just like small rocks. They are made of minerals that have been taken out of the blood and concentrated by the kidneys. Normally these insoluble materials (meaning that they will not dissolve in water) are carried away by the urine and discharged from the body. But once in awhile the conditions may be just right for the formation of a stone.

Two things are needed in order for a stone to form: An excess of insoluable material, and a lack of chemicals (water conditioners) in the urine that normally would prevent the insoluable material from settling out or forming crystals or small stones.

The normal kidney functions in filtering the blood, removing waste materials that the body does not want. In addition, if some minerals, normally used by the body, are in too high concentration in the blood, the kidney removes the excess. For example, if you have an excess of calcium in your blood, the kidney will tend to flush more calcium out in the urine. The same would happen when your body forms too much uric acid. As long as there are enough water conditioners in the urine to keep these in solution they will not form stones. Thus one of the biggest aids in avoiding a stone is to keep the urine dilute.

The one rule that applies to all types of kidney stones is to drink plenty of fluids—enough to keep the urine diluted at all times of the day and night. How do you know if you're drinking enough? If you pass at least three quarts of urine a day you are usually drinking plenty. A simple rule of thumb is that at least one urination each day should be clear or colorless. That means the kidneys are receiving plenty of fluid to keep the urine dilute. And the best fluid is water.

Kidney stones are especially a problem for men. The first attacks usually occur between the ages of 18 and 45. Not all are painful—many simply remain in the kidney or they may form inside the cell structure of the kidney and are unable to escape. In either case, such stones are not likely to cause any noticeable problems.

While doctors can do a number of things to make you more comfortable when suffering from a kidney stones, you can do the most good yourself. True, there are medicines which can either stop the enlargement of stones or even dissolve them. Even simple surgery can be used when the stone fails to pass. But it's a lot easier if you prevent the stones from developing in the first places.

Lunch will be served at 1 p.m.

Friends and relatives are invited to come and bring a picnic lunch.

MRS. ROBERT MORRIS WHITEHURST
the former Miss Debra Hart Clapp

Wed in Double-Ring Ceremony

Debra Hart Clapp and Robert Morris Whitehurst, reciting self-written vows, were united in marriage on Saturday, July 14, 1979, in the Trinity United Methodist Church in Bluefield, West Virginia. Dr. Aldred Wallace officiated the 2 p.m. double ring ceremony before an altar banked with white gladioli, white carnations tipped in mint, yellow pompons and yellow roses and flanked with candelabra holding white wedding tapers.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Clapp of Bluefield, West Virginia. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. John M. Clapp of Route 1, Appomattox and the late Mr. Clapp. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Whitehurst of New Bern, North Carolina, are the parents of the bridegroom.

Miss Gilda Lorenson of San Francisco, Ca., provided vocal selections and accompanied herself on the guitar.

The bride couple were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Clapp and Mr. Whitehurst at the altar. The bride was attired in a formal gown of satalustre organza and imported chantilly lace. Lace fashioned the empire waist and scoop neckline and cuffed the long bishop sleeves. Lace topped the flounced hemline of the full skirt which extended around the chapel train. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion bordered with imported French chantilly lace attached to a lace and seed pearl caplet.

Her cascading bouquet was composed of yellow roses, white daisies, and baby's breath.

Miss Lu Ann Leidy of Irwindale, Pennsylvania, attended the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Roberta Galford of Columbus, Ohio; Miss Cathy Cash of Bluefield, and Miss Anita Whitehurst, sister of the bridegroom of New Bern.

The attendants were attired in empire gowns of maize jersey, fashioned with spaghetti straps and accordian pleated full skirt. Self maize venise lace trellised down the bodice and a sheer chiffon capelet with a high, lace trimmed neckline overlaid the gown. Each carried a nosegay of white daisies, yellow roses, carnations tipped in mint, yellow pompons and baby's breath. Daisies and baby's breath adorned their hair.

Garnet Whitehurt of Ames, Iowa attended his brother as best man. Ushers were Butch Bost of Richmond, Virginia; Richard Clapp of Bluefield, brother of the bride, and Steven Cowgill of Denver, Colorado.

The mother of the bride wore a long gown of apricot with empire waist and chiffon capelet. The mother of the bridegroom chose a gown of mauve fashioned with a lace bodice attached to a pleated skirt and matching lace jacket. Both mothers had corsages of yellow roses and white daisies.

The reception was held in Asbury Hall of the church.

Mrs. Frances Combs, sister of the bride, attending the guest book. Servers included the bride's niece, Miss Rosann Brooks; Mrs. Lois Payne, Mrs. Rita Gott, Mrs. Leah Cash and Mrs. Grace Long.

The bride's table had a French lace overlay with tucks at corners with green and yellow ribbon and silver wedding bands.

On both sides of the cake was a five-tier silver candelabra with flowers. The top of the three tier pale yellow cake decorated with white daisies, was a bouquet of fresh flowers, which were also used to encircle the base.

The bride, valedictorian for her 1974 Bluefield High School graduating class, was graduated summa cum laude from the University of Virginia in 1977 with a major in biology. While there, she was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She is presently a junior at the Duke University School of Medicine.

Mr. Whitehurst, a 1973 graduate of New Bern High School, received a degree in electrical engineering from North Carolina State University and was president of Tau Beta Pi. He is a junior at Duke University School of Medicine.

Following a wedding trip to Fontana Lake in the Smokey Mountains, N. C., the couple will reside at 1423 Pennsylvania Ave., Durham, N.C.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the bridegroom at the Holiday Inn on Friday evening, July 13.

Mrs. Grace Long entertained in her home on Parkway Avenue at a wedding breakfast on Saturday morning, July 14.
